DRYWAVE® MASSAGE

How Important is Massage?

Did you know that tossing and turning at night has less to do with your mattress and more to do with your body's requirement for stimulation and "passive massage"? Believe it or not, the average person turns every 12 minutes while sleeping. Over 40 turns a night is a lot of compressing and releasing tissue where blood is stimulated in and out of capillaries effecting the circulatory and lymphatic system. You need massage, lots of massage!

Why do the best ideas often occur in the shower?

Chances are, some of your best thoughts result when the spray of warm water is directed on the back of your neck. This warm and gentle water cascade both soothes the body and stimulates the mind. The neck and back support our central nervous system, the body's neurological highway. Isolating this area with warmth and massage not only feels good, it can revive and stimulate.

How can it feel so good and be so good for you?

Massage and heat can have direct benefit to 11 of the body's organ systems. For example, the skin is the largest organ of the body and has a critical function to help regulate body temperature, protect inner organs, supply blood and nutrients to the body. The effects of massage and heat go far beyond the skin and also stimulate and promote wellness in the other internal organs. Visit solajet.com to learn more.

3 Distinct Therapies in 1

1. Massage Therapy

Deep tissue, non-irritating and always the perfect pressure to increase circulation, relieve stress and reduce pain.

2. Heat Therapy

Therapeutic penetrating heat with adjustable temperature control. Heat relaxes muscles and provides a distinct analgesic benefit.

3. Flushing (Wave) Therapy

The DRYWAVE® Massage is a therapeutic wave of water that delivers a full body sweeping massage effect for effective circulatory and lymphatic stimulation.

Real therapy without the irritation of too much pressure as with rigid mechanical devices. Water has powerful strength, yet gentle conforming pressure that targets muscle while avoiding bone and connective tissue.

DRYWAVE® Technology

Some describe the SolaJet feeling as a cross between a massage therapist and a hot tub. The system uses only about 35 gallons of water and is completely self-contained. Use fully clothed for the ultimate in convenience. Just 10 minutes leaves you with a renewed sensation.

The SolaJet DRYWAVE Massage System may be quite simply the "world's most therapeutic massage".
